Bill for the Payment of Expenses incurred

the first expenses of the Volunteer Companies—
i. e. the getting of them together. The opinion of drawn up by D. Lond, Jr. Erq. this war, it would seem, should be paid—future expenditures can be directed according to the will of the House. Many persons get up companies for the war under the supposition, natural withat that war under the supposition, natural without that whatever necessary liabilities they incurred in the undertaking would be discharged by the National Constructive—but especially because the Constructive and con

The Representatives of the People have deliberately and irrevocably resolved that this war was unnecessarily and unconstitutionally commenced by the set of the People have deliberately and irrevocably resolved that this war was unnecessarily and unconstitutionally commenced by the set of the People deat and what gives peculiar force to this expression of their opinion is, that they were elected upon the very ground that the President had plunged the trong as it is, is still less so than their aversion to a prolongation of the war.

strong as it is, is still less so than their averagon to a prolongation of the war.

Still it is a matter for calm consideration, how far the faith of the Government is piedged toward the payment of the expenses so far incurred in the war, or rather, what expenses should be deemed necessary, and of course, to be properly discharged and what not. Perhaps the mature opinion will be that the expenses alluded to come under the de

In the Senate, Mr. Dix engrossed the attention of Senators awhile in explanation of the merits of a bill presented by Lt. Col. Farmont, for the payment of certain obligations he entered into while acting for the Government in California. There can be no doubt from Mr. Dix's lucid and full state ment that the debts were honestly and necessarily incarred, and should be immediately discharged.

resident very properly declaring to accept his resignation. Not that Mr. Framowr did wrong in tendering it; on the contrary, the act does him incor, proceeding as it did from the conviction that the quasi-approval by the President of the late finding of the Court Martial was an unjust reflection upon the motives of his conduct while serving in California under Gen. Kranner or under Com Stockton. He was conscious of no wrong, and therefore refused with proper indignation to accept reinstatement as a condition of Executive elemency. Nor has the President acted less becomingly in refusing to accept his resignation. He is unwilling to allow an act resulting from the wounded sensibilities of an officer, "jealous in hon or"—however much he may approve the motive which dictated it—to enure to the detriment of the public service. or —however much he may approve the motive which dictated it—to enure to the detriment of the public service. He therefore keeps Col. Fremony in the army, in spite of himself.

Col. Mosroe's case comes up on Thursday week. The prevailing opinion here is, that he will gain the seat to which by the legitimate suffrages of his District he is entitled. I know of no Whigs who will vote against his claim, while I have heard of some Democrats who will not vote to retain the present member. It is not contended (that I know that Mr. Jackson was himself accessory to, or cognizant of, the enormous frauds, and violation of the elective franchise, which produced his nominal election. But no reasonable, impartial reader of the testimony taken will for a moment doubt that gross and highly culpable frauds were practiced at the election and by his political friends. The least that can be said of him is, he has been found in bad company. He has had injudicious friends, and been the victim of misplaced confidence.

It will be recollected that Col. Haskell of Tenno.

has given notice of a resolution expressive of sympathy with the French nation for its latest glorious achievement in getting rid of the perfidious branch of Orleans and substituting a republican government. This is right, but there should be no half-way sympathy—we should "fratgraize" with the French people in all their doings as promulgated by their "Provisional" Government. The whole thirty-five decrees, more or less, issued by that (Government was neith to suprove. The sighteenth, Government we ought to approve. PARADISE AND THE PERL is the taking title of a sacred cantata, the words from Lalla Rockb, shortly to be produced under the favorable auspices of the N. Y. Musical Institute, and which we predict will be particularly capilvating. ROBERT SCHUMAN, the youthful composer, is but little known out of his native land, but the Germans have appreciated his rare talents, and the palm of superiority is divided between him and the great Mendelssohn. The public owe, and not for the first time, great thanks to the Institute for their zeal in producing this work. It is one particularly well adapted to their capacities, giving fair scope for their excellent chorus and fine orchestra. It is written in a pleasing and less heavy style than most of the productions of the German school. In particular the recitatives are unusually varied and pleasing An overflowing house will evince the solid gratitude
